Jennie Collins Austin Heroine and Horsewoman

Those of us who have spent years doing Austin research have come away with the general impression that Austin men were the movers and shakers of their era. Many of them were doctors, lawyers, founders of towns, governors, generals, inventors - the list goes on. Rarely do we learn much of the Austin women, or those who married these great men, but for the few we do hear about, we find their exploits to be equal to those of their male counterparts.

Such is the case for Jennie Collins who, in 1783, married Colonel William Austin of the Gilder plantation near what is now Spartanburg, South Carolina (see our Nathaniel Austin of Greenville, SC database). The following story has been excerpted, with slight paraphrasing, from "The Austin and Allied Families" by James Waddy Austin of Atlanta, Georgia, 2nd edition 1972 by Josephine Manning Austin Knight, p 35-38.

Since the age of 12 years, Jennie Collins had been a superb horsewoman. She was familiar with the trails and river crossings of the Piedmont section, and she needed this knowledge when she, at age 16, was entrusted by her brother, Captain John Collins, with the hazardous enterprise of carrying his reports to General Morgan at his camp at Grindal Shoals. Captain Collins had been gathering new recruits for the Patriot cause and needed instructions as to the time and place he should report with his new force. His dispatches were sewn into the lining of Jennie's saddle.

Facing icy January winds, she sped away on her horse for the 40 mile ride. She had to swim her horse over two of the rivers she crossed, and was always in danger of capture by the British and Tories whose cruelties at this stage of the war were frightening and revolting. Tories had murdered defenseless patriot women in cold blood, and the cruel British General Tarleton had executed patriot prisoners of war.

Jennie narrowly escaped a collision with General Tarleton's troops for his forces, moving to attack General Morgan, crossed the path she had ridden over the day after she had passed. Regardless of her peril, she found the camp of the Patriot army and delivered her dispatches to the astonished commander. While at the camp Jennie also washed the General's shirts, leaving him with clean linen which he wore a few days later in the battle of Cowpens.

Then, with General Morgan's orders to her brother concealed in her saddle, Jennie galloped back over the lonely trails, again swam her horse through icy waters, and safely rejoined her soldier brother at his camp.

Captain Collins, with a fresh troop of 44 men, joined General Morgan at Cowpens on the night of 16 January 1781 just in the nick of time. The battle of the Cowpens was fought the next day and General Tarleton suffered a disastrous defeat. Captain Collins, young William Austin, whom Jennie afterward married, and his father Captain Nathaniel Austin all nobly did their part in achieving this wonderful victory.

(Another story in this book tells of Jennie saving her father's life at their home by furiously wielding a long carving knife at a Tory officer.)

Jennie Collins' name does not appear in any history of the Revolution, though her exploits were as heroic and are as well attested as those of Nancy Hanks, Betsy Ross, Rebecca Motte, and other women of the Revolution to whom the historians have accorded mention.

The fact that she had the good sense to marry an Austin also speaks well of her.

An Austin Research Challenge

This is a challenge to those who are going to Salt Lake City in July for the 2008 International Austin Convention.

There are a group of microfilm records that are called "General Index to Vital Records of Vermont, early to 1870". There are about 1360 Austin records on this set of films (according to Derk Phelps, who lives just outside Salt Lake City and went to the Family History Library to do a little investigating for me). What's on the films is more than an Index. I would say it is very close to the information that is found in the Census Soundex files.

Almost every New England Austin family had some of their branches go through Vermont, so there has to be a wealth of new information there. As an example of how valuable this might be I looked up a Jeremiah Austin (of the Robert of RI line). He is in Westford, Chittenden Co., VT in 1790 with a family of 7, then again in 1800 with a family of 8. The Robert database has just one child listed and that is for a second marriage in 1824.

So my challenge is that we split up the Austin names on the list, which is on two films, and transcribe them. Who will sign up for a section of this project? If 13 people volunteer, that would mean 100 records for each. We would then combine our efforts and publish the results for everyone to use. This would be very beneficial to many Austin family researchers.

Arthur M. Sikes, Jr.

It is always nice to hear from you:

Dear Alice,

Thank you so much for the Newsletter attachment.

With the new databases, I have traced our earliest ancestor to William Austin, 1706, Kent County, Maryland, so am very happy about that. I may have an Austin story for you; I have several ideas so will get back to you later. Thanks for offering to help with the editing.

Doing Research in Salt Lake City?

To prepare for your research in Salt Lake City visit the LDS website, www.familysearch.org. There you will find links to the Family History Library site, with information about the library's hours and a description of their extensive records collections, and to the Family History Library Catalog, which you can search by place, surname, key words or book title, author and subject.

PRESIDENT'S CORNER

The 2008 Austin Convention is just around the corner. I hope you plan to attend because being in Salt Lake City is always an exciting experience. Remember to make your hotel reservations before June 25! The hotel will only hold rooms for us until that date and July 24 - 26 is going to be a very busy time, with The Pioneer Heritage Festival being held then.

The Family History Library, with its friendly and very helpful staff, is the place to make that breakthrough in your search for your ancestors, and not just Austins. To make the most of your time in Salt Lake City some ground work should be done in advance. Come prepared with a list of names you want to research, books and microfilm you want to use. The library has a great on-line catalog and index to all of the data that is available. Don't pass up this great opportunity to meet your Austin Cousins and work on your family genealogy.

Vermont Vital Records Project

The purpose of the Vermont Vital Records Project (see page 2) is to transcribe an index of Vermont vital records, from when the state was formed and towns began to keep records until 1870. If you are interested and have not already contacted me, please let me know that you would like to help. Almost all of the New England Austin families had branches that lived in Vermont at some point in time and I know from looking at the Robert Austin of Rhode Island database there are a lot of missing family members who were born, married or died there.

Special Election

There will be a special election at our annual business meeting to elect a new president. (Last year I agreed to serve one additional year.) A nominating committee has been formed. If you know someone that you think would be a good president of the Austin Families Association please contact one of the committee members. They are:

- Lois Cody (513-761-6092, boblocody@peoplepc.com)
- Betty Shelhamer, (310-275-6502, bshelhamer@aol.com)
- Kathi Kobel (562-630-1457, kathikoble@mac.com)

Updating Your Austin Line

When is the last time you have sent an update to your Austin line? We are always adding people through births and marriages and, unfortunately, losing people who have passed on. That information should be sent to the compiler of your

Austin line. Remember we remove all information on living persons on our web site but we do want to have up to date information in our databases. So send any updates that you have.

It is not just the statistical information we are looking for – also the stories, sources of information, military service, occupation, schooling, hobbies, and any other information that you think future generations would like to know about those Austin ancestors of yours. This includes stories about yourself. I'm sure that you have done some interesting things that your grandchildren and great-grandchildren would like to hear about, and who knows the details better than you.

Your AFAOA Web Site Behind the Scenes

To those of you who are loyal web site visitors and especially to those of you who actively help us to maintain the accuracy and extent of the 49 databases presented on the web site - you have probably not noticed very much changing. The colors, the photos, and the various pages look the same, all the links work. It seems that not much ever happens very rapidly (unless you happen to notice the additions and updates to the databases).

This past March, we learned that our hosting server had to change their setup which would require us to move all of our files and links to a different server with a different server address. We basically had to duplicate the site on the new server without interfering with the operation of the old site. We had to verify that these relocated files still worked at the new site, and accomplish a complete revision all of the links that you click on to navigate within the site.

The plan was to actually build a parallel site, verify that the new site was properly operating, switch our AFAOA address (www.afaoa.org) to the new site, and then shut down the old site. We had two weeks to accomplish the change-over.

This is your team that works in the web site "wings": Sue Osborn is responsible for all of the pages that let you navigate the site. She is the artist that comes up with the beautiful and professional looking pages, the photos, and the tables which give you access to the various databases.

Bill Minnick is our contact person with the server people, and with Network Systems, Inc. which points our AFAOA address to the proper server. Bill also takes care of the e-mail forwarders, which pass e-mail directed to afaoa.org to the proper individual. Jim Carlin works the databases which take up the bulk of the memory required by the site. He also had to change all of the link definitions in the operating software.

The team met in Minnick's home in Cupertino, California on 3 April 2008 (Sue via telephone) and decided how to split up the work, established proper communication protocols, set a new password, and then spent the weekend accomplishing the change-over. By mid day Monday, 7 April, we were ready to

Austin Database Update

There has been considerable activity in the Austin databases during the past year. This is the result of incorporating much of the hard-copy material contained in the AFAOA archives by the genealogists, as well as contributions and corrections from members and visitors to our web site.

A break-through in the Robert Austin of Kingston, Rhode Island line has been made by Arthur M. Sikes, Jr., compiler for that line, and Betty Shelhamer (Stephen Austin of New York). Together they have verified what had been a proposed correction of Edith Austin Moore's book on Robert, which has allowed the absorption of the Stephen Austin database into the Robert Austin database. This has reduced the number of databases from 50 to 49, and is consistent with the aim of combining databases where it makes sense.

Besides the change in the Robert database, other activity in the Northern area since the last convention include updates to:

- Daniel Austin of Longmeadow, Massachusetts (Tim Scott Austin, compiler),
 - Richard Austin of Charlestown, Massachusetts (Jim & Liz Carlin, compilers),
 - Thomas and Esther Austin of New York (Stephen W. Henderson, compiler).
- Some of the lines in the Northern Unplaced database.

There has also been a lot of activity in the Southern area. Updates have been posted on the web site for:

- Bartholomew Austin of Virginia (Liz Carlin, compiler),
 - John Austin of North Carolina (Kevin Austin, compiler),
 - John Austin, Sr. of the Southside Region of Virginia (Dorothy Vanover, compiler).
- John & Charity Austin of Montgomery Co, MD (Liz Carlin, compiler),
- Nathaniel Austin of Greenville, South Carolina (Liz Carlin, compiler),
 - Thomas & Rebecca Austin of Nelson County, Virginia (Liz Carlin, compiler),
 - White County, Tennessee Austins (Liz Carlin, compiler),
 - William Austin of Kent County, Maryland (Liz Carlin, compiler),
 - William & Elizabeth Austin of Craven County, South Carolina (Joy Anita Shaw, compiler).
- Some of the lines in the Southern Unplaced database.

These updated Austin databases are available on the AFAOA web site in two forms: an interlinked Family Group Sheet format and a Acrobat text searchable Descendancy Book.

Plans are being made to modernize the software on the site to add pedigree and descendancy charts to the current family group sheets.

Database Chairman

Austin Treasures Recovered

They were “treasures” to me – important bits of family history that were scattered and presumed lost when our home was destroyed by Hurricane Katrina in August 2005.

The silver cup was presented in 1852 to my great grandfather, Albert Bennett Austin Sr., when he left Schenectady, New York, moving west to Paris, Edgar County, Illinois. He was active in public service, was appointed a Police Justice in Schenectady and elected Judge of the County Court in Paris. The cup is inscribed “Presented to A. B. Austin, A token of respect as a Citizen and an Officer”, and also with the names James E. VanHorn, A. Mathews, David Hersey and Joshua Barker. A biography of Judge Austin appeared in the Summer 2002 edition of the AFAOA Newsletter.

The 4 inch tall wax seal, dating from 1905, was described in an article on Austin crests in the December 2002 AFAOA Newsletter.

The good news is that both the cup and the seal have been found – literally dug out of the ground where they were buried by the churning water. A new chapter has been added to their history.

Need access to historical newspapers and hard to find books? Check these out:

The Library of Congress and the National Endowment for the Humanities announced that “Chronicling America: Historic American Newspapers” is debuting with more than 226,000 pages of public-domain newspapers from CA, FL, KY, NY, UT, VA, and the District of Columbia published from 1900-1910. The fully searchable site is at:

www.loc.gov/chroniclingamerica

Both Yahoo and Google search engines tie into the “Open Worldcat Project” which will help locate libraries that hold a hard-to-find book you’ve been searching for. Simply enter the name of the book in the search field followed by “Find a Library”. This will respond with a listing of libraries holding the item.

AFAOA NEEDS VOLUNTEERS

To extract data from old correspondence files. AFAOA has correspondence files dating back to 1950 and some earlier. Most of the information in these files is already in our many Austin databases. However before these files go into storage, we want to make sure every tidbit of useful information is gleaned from them and entered into the appropriate database.

We will begin with the 1200+ Southern line Austin files. Volunteers are needed to take a section of these files and check them against the information in our AFAOA databases. Contact AFAOA Genealogist Liz Austin Carlin should any conflicts in the data need to be resolved.

I will bring some of this correspondence to Salt Lake City so that volunteers can take them home to work on. I will be happy to mail sections to anyone else who simply e-mails me a request.

The resulting data should be sent to the compiler for the database in question. If the database cannot be determined, send it on to Liz.

Remember, it can be the smallest detail that provides the link to your ancestors. Let us know if you can help with this project. Contact Liz Carlin or Bonnie Bigolin.

JUST IN TIME FOR SLC!

FamilySearch and The Generations Network, Inc., parent company of Ancestry.com, announced an agreement that provides free access of Ancestry.com to patrons of the Family History Library in Salt Lake City and the 13 largest regional family history centers.

With this new agreement full access will be provided to more than 24,000 Ancestry.com databases and titles and 5 billion names in family history records. In addition to the Family History Library, the following 13 regional family history centers have been licensed to receive access to Ancestry.com:

Mesa, AZ; Los Angeles, CA; Oakland, CA; Orange, CA; Sacramento, CA; San Diego, CA; Idaho Falls, ID; Pocatello, ID; Las Vegas, NV; Logan, UT; Ogden, UT; St. George, UT; Hyde Park, London, England.

Among other U.S. and international record collections, FamilySearch patrons at the designated facilities will have access to Ancestry.com’s completely indexed U.S. Federal Census Collection, 1730-1930, and more than 100 million names in passenger lists from 1820-1960. Throughout the year, Ancestry.com has added indexes to Scotland censuses from 1841-1901, created the largest on-line collection of military and African American records, and reached more than 4 million user-submitted family trees.

We were off the air for probably no more than four hours while Network Systems changed pointing instructions to countless computers all over the world, and then up came the same old site, just like before, stable, dependable, not much happening very rapidly....
